

The panel were impressed with Kerry's ability to juggle her own family commitments as well as help out in a variety of ways to help those most affected by the pandemic. She used her sewing talents to help those NHS workers on the frontline and delivered food to the more vulnerable members of our community at a time when foodbanks really needed volunteers. It sounds like she gave a great deal of her time to selflessly help others - a true Bournville Star. Thank you!

From the nomination:

During lockdown my wife Kerry, who is a teaching assistant and therefore not at her school during lockdown, decided to spend her time helping others despite also being a mother to our 8 and 3 year old! She initially began making bags for NHS workers to be able to wash their uniform in, and had material donated to her by local neighbours who were equally impressed with her efforts. Kerry, however, also decided to help complete runs for the local food bank, and several times a week would deliver food to those less fortunate than ourselves. As a police officer I have seen the benefit first hand of the work people like my wife have volunteered to do – she has asked for absolutely nothing in return and we feel she is deserving of being a Bournville star that selflessly gave up her own time to help other people
